

Quindaro Chindowan, May 13, 1857

Chindowan

Chindowan logo
A Bundle of Sticks

Transcriptions are presented without changes except to improve readability.

CHINDOWAN, is a queer name, for a paper, many may think, and perhaps it is. It was adopted, not for the purpose of appearing peculiar or eccentric, but to avoid using one of the stereotyped titles for newspapers, such as "Herald," "Register," "Times," &c., which may be found attached to journals, alike in States and Territories. Chindowan is a Wyandott word, meaning Leader, and will, we hope, answer the purpose to which we have appointed it, quite as well as any of those titles that most publishers think the only appropriate ones to be used. It may be interesting to our readers to know that it is pronounced Chin-do-wan, the accent resting on the last syllable.

"Quindaro" is also a Wyandott word that some interpret by the adage "In union there is strength," which will explain the device [logo] with which our title is embellished.